European Year of Intercultural Dialogue

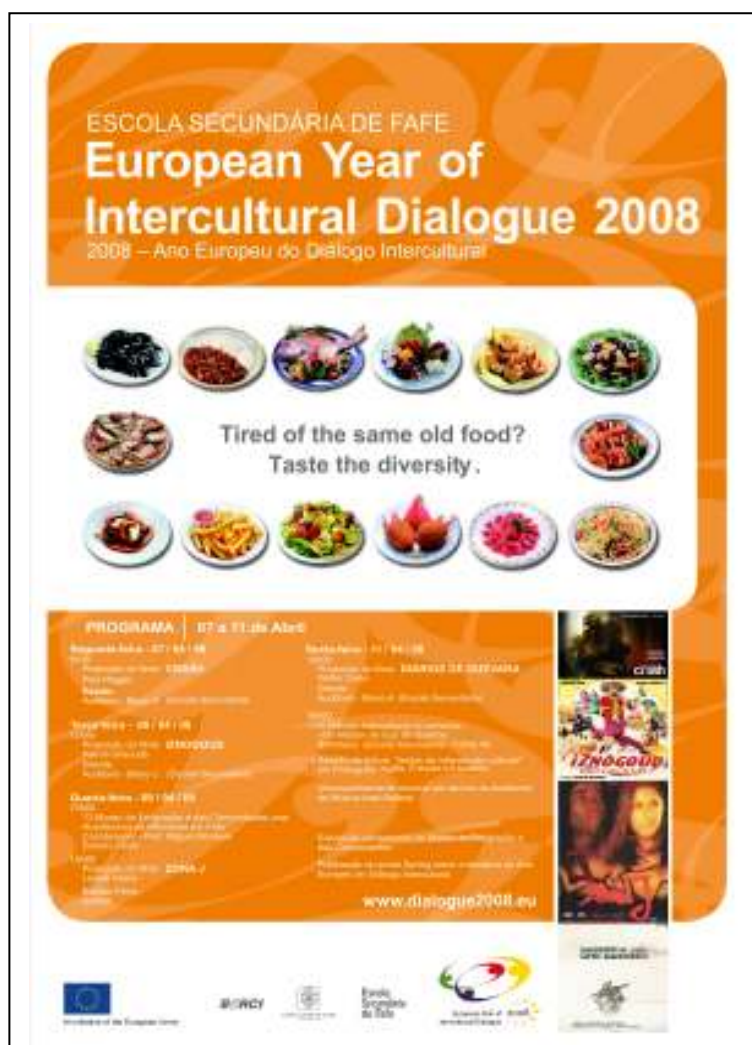

Editorial

Cultures should be thought to hold closely bound up with one another inasmuch as man's feelings and emotions underlie all of them. Indeed, any frame of mind ranging from the deepest distress and gloom to the most gorgeous happiness may be felt all over the world. The messages conveyed not only by the sublime lyric petals but also by the great deeds of epic poems profoundly touch mankind's heart. A soft melody is likely to arouse tender feelings in everyone. They are to be read and listened to as a wonderfully fine cultural heritage that belongs to everybody.

Therefore, no boundaries of discrimination should be built. A genuine value of fellowcitizenship should arise in order to bridge gaps and make it possible for us to rise above the prejudices so as not to be torn between different cultures. Northern Ireland is everywhere as well as the Indians and the Tibetians are. Despite being far from us, they are too close to us! Where? Within the homeland of the human rights, flying on the wings of our sensitiveness!

Let us shake the universal flag of solidarity, brotherhood and selflessness!

The teachers of English

This school year, the “Spring” includes texts in all the languages learnt and spoken in our school, because its underlying topic is the European Year of Intercultural Dialogue.
